

Finnair Adds Lapland Flights for Winter 2017

by Newsdesk | Jan 19, 2017 10:07am

Finnair has announced that it will start flying nonstop flights to Finnish Lapland from London, Paris, Frankfurt and Zürich from mid-December 2017 until the end of March 2018. The ski and holiday resorts in Kittilä and Ivalo are attracting an increasing number of international travelers and the area is well-known for its beautiful nature, winter activities and opportunities to experience the Northern Lights, Finnair said.

Finnair will fly two weekly flights between London's Gatwick airport and Ivalo on Thursdays and Sundays, one weekly flight between Zurich and Kittilä on Saturdays, one weekly flight between Frankfurt and Kittilä on Tuesdays and one weekly flight between Paris CDG and Kittilä on Tuesdays. The flights will be operated with A320 and A321 aircraft.

Additional capacity and flights to Lapland from Helsinki airport will also be added for the 2017-2018 winter season, offering more connections for Finnair's customers. Finnair will add three weekly flights to Rovaniemi, bringing it to 30 weekly frequencies. Furthermore, additional frequencies will be added to Ivalo (4 weekly), Kittilä (4 weekly) and Kuusamo (1 weekly).

In total, Finnair will operate up to 52 weekly frequencies from Helsinki to Lapland airports during the peak winter season. With these additions, Finnair will be increasing its total capacity to Lapland airports by 18 percent compared to the current winter season.

The new flights are now available for booking.

Visit www.finnair.com