India's Nubra Valley Camels

There are few things in life worth living for and those things just may ride on the back of the Nubra Valley camel. While the wind whispers Buddhist chants, India – and the rich culture she has to offer – is beckoning you to rise to your highest self - seek beauty and truth from the inside out.

This is why we're sharing the latest and greatest among customized India tours and buddhist retreats. Geringer Global Travel, is offering a great summer special to India: "Beauty and Buddhism," a 13-day customized journey through northern India combining cultural immersions in local villages, visits to ancient Buddhist monasteries and palaces, rafting and optional camel riding excursions.

This 13-day trip, starting at $1,939 per person (valid through September 30, 2011), visits the thrilling cities of Delhi, Leh, Alchi, Nubra, and Agra and includes everything except international flights, some meals, and personal expenses.

Highlights include:

- Hosted dinner with local family in Leh, the capital city of Ladakh, surrounded by the towering Himalayas
- Inigorating rafting trip down the Indus River from Phey village to Nimu
- Nubra Valley, known for its unparalleled trekking and houses several Buddhist monasteries
- Meeting with the supernatural Oracle of Sabu in the village of Ayu
- Imperial 'ghost city' of Fatehpur Sikri built of sandstone by Emperor Akbar

This is a great deal for people looking to travel to India this summer so check out the website below and, if you're seriously considering your own Eat, Pray, Love buddhist trip to India, reach out to us and perhaps you can write about it for Eco-Adventurer.com!
