Every Thursday I write about a place I dream of going. This week, an email from Geringer Global Travel caught my eye.

It's offering a trip called the Colors of Rajasthan, a 16-day custom tour of India with a special stop at the Pushkar Camel and Cattle Fair.

The Pushkar fair is a community festival held on the banks of the beautiful Pushkar Lake. Thousands come from all corners of India to participate in the dancing, feasting, musical competitions and trading of more than 50,000 camels.

This trip starts at $2,350 per person, double and includes 4- and 5-star accommodations, site entrance fees, transport services, English-speaking tour guides, unique activities, most meals and more. Book by Sept. 30 and receive a $200 discount, per couple.

For more information, go here.

Highlights Include:

Watching the sun rise over the Taj Mahal in Agra, its light dappling the monument's white marble in a breathtaking pinkish-golden glow;

Riding an elephant to the top of the Amber Fort in Jaipur, built by Raja Man Sing;

Enjoying a camel-milk ice cream treat at a breeding farm in Bikaner, while learning all about these majestic caravan animals;

Taking an afternoon camel ride to the sand dunes outside Jaisalmer;

Riding through the bustling markets of Jodphur via tuk-tuk (motorized rickshaw);

Visiting the homes of textile artisans to learn the uniquely nuanced styles of Udaipur art.
