During filming for Disney's Pete's Dragon, Robert Redford, Bryce Dallas Howard and Wes Bentley explored New Zealand with their families. Situated in Auckland's Hauraki Gulf Marine Park, Waiheke Island features stunning vineyards, pristine white beaches and countless luxury accommodations.

Bryce Dallas Howard and Wes Bentley called The Pah home during their stay in Waiheke. The lodge hovers on a seaside cliff, surrounded by lush gardens. Howard enjoyed playing on the beach with her children.

Just up the hill from Ecozip Adventures, Mudbrick Vineyard boasts a restaurant with one of the most praised views in the world, overlooking Waitemata Harbour and Auckland city.

Bentley found adventure in Ecozip, a zipline course across beautiful vineyards with breathtaking views of the sea.

Robert Redford and his family took a short helicopter flight to Paradise, New Zealand, an area of expansive farmland surrounded by mountains. The easiest way to reach luxury resorts in Paradise is by helicopter, and Redford took Glacier Southern Lakes Helicopters, the group that filmed the aerial sequences for Pete's Dragon.

Redford and his family stayed at Wyuna House, a luxury villa set in a private natural reserve. Located above Lake Wakatipu, the villa is the perfect respite for the nature lover, with over 19 hikes to explore.
