For some, the ideal vacation itinerary revolves around sightseeing and action-packed adventures. For others, it's all about getting from meal to meal. We don't judge; sometimes the way to a destination's heart truly is through its stomach.

If you go to bed thinking about breakfast and ponder dinnertime cocktail pairings at lunch, these up-and-coming foodie retreats should be on your travel to-do list.

Queenstown, New Zealand

Marlborough, New Zealand's flagship wine region, put the country on the international wine stage. Now, the country is also experiencing an explosion of microbreweries and craft beer.

Queenstown, located in the heart of the region, puts a decadent spin on New Zealand cuisine. Stoneridge Estate features a seasonal menu served in an elevated dining room looking over the vineyard, with beautiful views across Lake Hayes to the mountains beyond. Private candlelit dinners can be arranged upon request.

And for when you need to cure that wine hangover, Queenstown knows its coffee and brunch. Get yourself an original flat white at Joe's Garage and a traditional flaky minced meat pie at Fergbaker, and take it to go on your next adventure.
