

Travel

DEALS, TIPS AND TRENDS

« Previous Post

Next Post »

Latest tour option: Gluten-free Tuscany; what next?

by: Doreen Hemlock

July 17th, 2012 | 11:00 AM

Nowadays, it seems there are trips for nearly every kind of group, so how about this one: A gluten-free tour of Italy?

No wheat bread, no traditional pasta – only foods that exclude the gluten protein found in wheat, barley, rye, malt and other items. That might mean eating rice-based dishes or non-grain specialties from meats to fish and vegetables.

Perillo Tours is offering its "Gluten-Free Tuscany" tour Oct. 18-25 departing from New York at a cost of $2,150 plus airfare for double-occupancy stay.

What tour will they come up with next?

San Gimignano in Tuscany, Italy; Courtesy of sangimignano.net

Permalink | ShareThis

Comments (2 Comments)

Advertisement

NOW THROUGH JANUARY 6 ONLY

National Theatre of Great Britain production

WarHorse

LINCOLN CENTER THEATER

The wonder

About the authors

Arlene Satchell covers retail, marine industry and telecom trends for the Sun Sentinel. The travel buff and adventure lover is always looking for new places to explore.

Doreen Hemlock writes about tourism, international business and other beats for the Sun Sentinel since 1996. She's visited more than 50 nations and lived 17 years in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Connect with us

Twitter

Facebook

RSS

Email