

Fall Foliage Tours in the U.S. and Canada

by Paul Rubio
September 21, 2017

While we love our fall foliage road trips, it's nice to experience autumn outside the box. From swinging tree-to-tree on an aerial adventure course in Stowe to gliding over the Finger Lakes in a two-seat sailplane, check out our favorite lesser-known ways to experience fall splendor across North America.

4/10 See (almost) all of Canada

Why we love it: Attention, die-hard fall devotees: Fairmont Hotels & Resorts has partnered with Canada's VIA Rail in honor of the country's 150th anniversary to create The Great Canadian Railway Adventure, a 20-day cross-country journey that's all about checking out fall foliage and enjoying the Canadian good life. Trips, which span a total of four nights on the tracks and 15 nights in various top Fairmont hotels, begin in Vancouver, pass through the Canadian Rockies and Ontario, and end in Quebec, with fabulous fall tours included at all locations.

When to go: Departures from Vancouver take place on September 27 and October 4 and 11.

Courtesy Claude Robidoux/Great Canadian Railroad Adventure