Milan Fashion Week is a major event that attracts celebrities, jet setters, designers and fashion-forward travelers from around the world.

Just in time for the annual trendsetting extravaganza held in February, here is a look at some of the city's most noteworthy hotels to keep on your radar.

The list includes recommendations from Forbes, which recently released its take on two of the newest hotels in the city, as well as properties identified by TravelPulse and other publications.

Fifty House

Described by Forbes as one of the rare hotels in Milan that's catching up with the city's fashion-forward status, Fifty House is a new luxury, boutique property that's all about showcasing design.

The 50-room hotel is filled with modern art and is housed in a historic building that was once an ancient boarding school. The property's creators have renovated the old school to be a place that's luxurious but also informal; cozy yet modern.

"The spaces that welcome the guests of Fifty House are those of a house, the house of a refined and cultured traveler, who scatters objects from his travels and exclusive pieces of art all over his spaces," states the hotel website.
