Travel tidbits: double miles, bonus points & more

Posted on November 6th, 2012 by Harriet Baskas

American Airlines is sorry.

Sorry about a lot of things, no doubt, but definitely sorry about the service it's been providing to passengers recently.

So in an effort to make nice, the airline is offering some nice bonus mile deals between now and the end of the year.

AAAdvantage members will earn double miles on American Airlines, American Eagle or the American Connection carrier from November 16, 2012, through November 26, 2012 and earn double elite-qualifying miles and points for flights taken between now and the end of the year. You'll need to register for the offer. Details here.

Want more bonuses? Sign up for the "Thanks Again" program, which awards frequent-flier miles for parking, shopping or dining at participating merchants at the airports and at businesses in many towns. Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport just joined the program and it's a fair bet that your local airport has signed up too. Do a search here to find out.

And here's something fun:

This spring all Finnair airplanes will be decked out with special textiles and tableware bearing classic patterns from Marimekko, a Finnish design firm. Two of the airline's long-haul aircraft will also be painted with a livery based on Marimekko designs. An Airbus A340 is already adorned with a floral print from 1964 and another plane will get its Marimekko marking in the spring.
