Who makes a better bagel? An international showdown

By Merisa Fink, Contributor

There's a new bagel on the block, and some say it's the best. Well, actually, it's not new at all: the Montreal bagel, drawing from the same Polish roots as its hallowed New York cousin, is smaller, sweeter and denser, with a larger hole, and is boiled in honey-sweetened water before baking in a wood-fired oven.

Kathie Lee and Hoda try the Canadian version of a favorite breakfast standby.

Get out the cream cheese. There's some tasting to do.

Kathie Lee and Hoda tried the bagels from our neighbors to the north while on location in Montreal -- and they were pleasantly surprised.

They're not the only ones. Famously, New Yorkers are proud of their pillowy version of the breakfast treats. But some city dwellers actually prefer the Canadian import, and line up at a Brooklyn deli called Mile End, which ships them in from across the border. Haven't tried the Canadian specialty? Order them straight from the source here.

TODAY's Kathie Lee Gifford and Hoda Kotb set out in search of what John Lennon, bagels and a mime have in common in Quebec's la belle ville.

Have you tried Montreal bagels?

Yes - they're hole-y better!

I think they kinda missed the point that it is Montreal Quebec, (not Montreal Canada). There is a difference. They missed so much but they only had 24 hours and if the point was to make folks from the US find it more accessible to come, I think they accomplished it, but they really FAILED when they didn't feature a musician of Quebec, Eric Lapointe, Marie Mai, anyone actually who is a Quebec musician, of which there are so many excellent choices.

I never eat pizza in Montreal. It's better in Troy than here, NYC pizza is a special thing, but the bagels are really better and they boil them in honey water before the bake so they are just a tiny bit sweet. The place they went is the bagel God. They often give kids bagels, smart move, to make a lifelong customer. (There is some good pizza here, but it's different and not NY style)

Smoked meat is better here too. Schwartz's is famous but The Main has better meat. Just for the record.

Good publicity for Montreal but cheesy as f*ck. Where are the road constructions? The pot holes? The riots?
